

Mark Sweet, Ph.D. is Trainer & Consultant with Disability Rights Wisconsin (DRW), a federally funded nonprofit designated to protect and advocate the rights of children and adults with disabilities. In this role, Mark works with preschool and school programs, supported work and supported living organizations, consumer and parent groups, long term care programs and others. He also works on a federally funded anti-violence grant related to individuals with disabilities. The emphasis of his work is to better understand the point of view of those who receive support.

Peter Leidy has been learning from people with disabilities since 1983. For 20 years he worked for Options in Community Living, a supported living agency in Madison, Wisconsin. His roles included direct support, support coordination, staff recruitment, supporting direct service staff, community building and administrative responsibilities. Peter develops training materials and conducts trainings on a wide variety of topics. He also consults with individuals, families, organizations, counties, and states in areas such as supported living, self-determination, organizational development, building community relationships, and supporting and valuing staff.

We once said “Seeing is believing”. Research has revealed that eyewitnesses are often unreliable. We still turn to experts but it turns out that experts can be biased.

We have thought that making ethical decisions and taking ethical actions are a sequential, rational process. Now, we are learning that trying to work rationally does not automatically include ethics.

One important question is: In moments of decision and action, are you saying and doing what you thought you would say and do?

During this session, we will look at our everyday work in the context of some newer findings about how we are built to make decisions. We invite you to consider your process and practice of ethics through this newer and possibly less familiar lens.
